The montry has recently had a far more eminent so dier than Gen, Hancock at the head of the government, and it has come to the concluon that a purely military career, however illustrious or successful, is very poor training for the more delicate and difficult duties of nivil administration. In the case of Gen. Grant this was noted by multitudes wao roted for him. But the country had then alt just emerged from a great war to preserve he national life, and Gen. Grant was put forward as the representative of a great cause which had been bapt zed in blood and vindiceted by the national might. Hence there was some fitness than in naming him for the presidency; but that occasion having passed away, his party declined recently to name bim again. Gen. Hancock, however, never held the rank of a representative of the na Gen Hamondy however, Daver tional cause in the national struggle, for he tinguished above many hundreds of others. igain, the party which has now made him is candidate is not fitly represented by a oldier who tought on the national side through the great struggle. At the south the party was all rabel, and fought for the onfederacy. At the north it was, as a party, sounced it a failure, demanded that it should cease, and went to the country on that issue in a national election. Hence the party is not now justly represented by a national

It is really similar to the inconsistit, in the Tilden campaign of four years sign the democratic banks developed mon strength than it had shown on any former occasion, simply because it had a candidat who was the best possible expression of its furne intentions. Hence Tilden was ideas and purposes its past history and its ager man than Hannock is now. The laker is no representative of the demomatic party, though it will control Kim if elected. Under his habits of militery subordination he will take his orders from it as obediently at he took his orders from his superior officer in the field. A manof moderate intellectual calibre and very or dinary at ainments, he could not be expected to surmount the difficulties of his novel pasition by the force of action. His necessary in-aptitude for the complicated and difficult problems of civil government and his known relations during a dozen years past with demo-occatic politicians who have had him in training for the presidency, would render him the more figurehead of an administration which would be controlled in the interest of his party, and by which the government would be warped from the line of safe nation at principles which fortunately have been predominant in it during the last twenty years. The solid south would be at his back as imperious and arrogant as ever, demand ing control of the government and pressing claims for what it suffered during the wa and unhappily there is no assurance that he would not yield at complainantly to its de mands as he did in 1867, when he issued his samous order in Louisana which was designed to aid Andrew Johnson in overthrowing reconstruction in the so the la an order announcing a trite principle of aw, the truth of which under ordipary circumstances is indisputable, he enuraged and sustained civil, social and policical suar by in a community to which such order was not applicable because of general

Thus it is that the very act for which Gen. Hapto it is most pressed by a class of partiqualifications for the duties of a chief magistrain; and this want in him is rendered all the more striking by the great contrast it affords with the symmetrical completeness of Gen. Garneld's equipment for the high place for which both are named. Gen. Garfield was shore gallant soldier, though he did not enter the service through West Point or the postals of the regular army.
